Mrs. Major Smith is mourning this morning over the loss of a beautiful rose plant stolen from her collection last night by some one reaching through the fence and pulling it up bodily. The plant was a favorite, because it had become rooted and bore a flower of beauty and exquisite odor. The lady has given much time, labor and expense in getting her flower garden in fine shape, and now to have some vandal steal her finest plant is too bad. The foot prints on the outside of the fence indicate it was a woman who stole the flower.
